This was a very important workshop for students because they got to know about the objective of finance Learning, methods of investment, risks involved in investment and ways to curb out these risks and invest effectively. There was total 8 comprehensive sessions. It was divided into two sets of four and in two days from 11:00 A. M.-4:00 P. M., it was completed. First day we learnt about Finance investment, particularly objective of financial education, importance of financial education, importance of investment, mid-term, short-term and long-term investment plans, different types of equity, savings, source of money etc Other specific terms which we learnt were compounding interest, Rule of 72 and also the different opportunities of Financial Investment. We also got the learning of how to start the process of investment on our own and basically it was an overall knowledge of handling finances well. Second day, the session began with the concept of mutual funds learning. It focused on the important aspects of mutual funds and the procedure for investment in mutual funds and also, how a long term investment is more beneficial than a short-term. We also learned about demat account and saving account. The team of Nism were very co-operating and they conducted the sessions smoothly. It was a very good learning experience for us. Finance is a major part of life, and this workshop made us more aware about it. We are extremely thankful to all our teachers and Nism team for conducting this workshop.

20. It is said, 'Think before you speak' and it can be added to that 'Read before you think'. This is true for all, more so in the case of teachers and teacher educators. It is an obvious observation today that the undergraduate students in our universities need to be voracious readers and effective communicators through writing in order to excel in the globally competitive era. The education system today is advancing towards imparting the 21st century skills to its learners. The four Cs which are most sought after in the 21st century skills are Critical thinking, Creativity, Collaboration and Communication. If the prospective teachers passing out of the universities are to be equipped with the essential 21st century skills, reading and reflecting on what is read is the first step.

Need and importance- A number of studies have shown that the teachers as well as student teachers do not read books other than the text books they have to teach or the books related to the syllabus of the course they are pursuing. As the goal of any teacher education programme is to prepare teachers as reflective practitioners. One of the strategies to achieve this goal could be to provide opportunities to the student teachers to read the given texts and to reflection various angles. With this aim NCTE has incorporated the course "Reading, and Reflecting on Texts" for teacher education programmes since 2014 under the courses for Enhancing Professional Capacities. The course is aimed at creating an atmosphere to learn to read and think, both individually and interactively in groups; thereafter, respond critically and creatively. This workshop aimed at enhances perspective teacher's metacognitive awareness to become conscious of their own thinking process as they grapple with diverse texts. These readings and reflections also provide ample contexts for writing with a sense of purpose, thus enhancing communication skills. In this Workshop, scholars from various universities of the country delivered their lectures including Prof. Niranjan Kumar Sahay from MGKVP, Dr. Sweta Dwivedi, Dr. Sian Lachhandami and Dr. K.K. Tripathi from Mizoram University, Dr. Arti Nirmal ,Dr. Pankaj Singh and Prof. Prabhakar Singh from Banaras Hindu University. The workshop was organised by Dr. Vinita, Assistant Professor, Department of Education, Arya Mahila P.G. College. The Convener of the workshop was Dr. Namita Sinha, Associate professor, Department of Education.

Day 1

Department with Collaboration of Bharat Scouts & Guides, Uttar Pradesh from 8th-12th May, 2023 for B.Ed. 2nd year students. The programme was coordinated by Dr. Namita Sinha. The camp instructors were Meena Kumari, Course Director DTC(G) and Rameshwari Kumari DOC(G). The student teachers were divided into small groups and each group had its leader. The activities done by the students during these five days were daily flag hoisting and prayer, march-past, taking notes during theory classes, learning to tie different kinds of knots, learning to use triangular and long bandages and making of tents. Many cultural activities were done e.g. singing, dancing, poetry recitation and performing nukkad natak during camp fire. In this programme students were learned the skills to help an injured person with first aid programme until he/she receives any medical help from a doctor. For example, the students learned how to stop bleeding, how to support the injured without stretcher and how to stock a first aid kit for helping the injured and sick. They were made aware of all those important things which they needed to stock in a first aid kit. During the programme, the students learned to support and move someone with fracture to prevent further worsening of the injury. They learned to make simple stretchers by using bed sheets/cloth and simple bamboos available in homes. They were made aware of the philosophy of first aid that a severely injured or sick person may be kept alive before the arrival of proper medical aid.

The students also learned how to prepare a tent house with sheet or fabric, bambos and ropes. This was the most interesting part of the 5-days camp. The tents were made and decorated by all the group members. They cooked food also and served it to their teachers. The camp concluded on the fifth day with a grand 'Dikshant Samaroh' where the students took a pledge to serve their country. The chief guests of the dikshant samaroh were Dr. Shashikant Dixit, Manager, AMPGC and Dr. Umesh Kumar Singh, Secretary, Varanasi Scouts and Guides. The students were distributed sweets and refreshments. The blessing addressed was given by Prof. Rachna Dubey, Principal, AMPGC, Varanasi. - 5- On 17th January, 2023, a TV program titled “Mahaul Kya Hai” sponsored by News24 was held in the premises of Arya Mahila P.G. College. The agenda of the program was to inquire about the political and social issues being discussed among the students of higher education. The program was hosted by Mr. Rajeev Ranjan. As the program aims to figure out the core reality of a situation by discussing a matter of relevance with the citizens themselves, Mr. Rajeev Ranjan briefly explained the topic for the day and moved towards the students for their point of view. The students of BA (IInd year), BA (IIIrd year) and MA (IInd year) of the Department of Political Science took active participation in the discussion. Khushi Yadav of BA (IIIrd year) explicitly expressed her view that in order to attain women empowerment, one must be ready to fight all the odds because the image of a ‘good girl’ as curated by society is just to limit the possibilities for females. Aakhya Yadav of MA(IInd year) shared her own experience that how much she had to convince her parents in order to pursue studies further as the definition of settling down is different for both the genders. Meanwhile, Shruti Sharma of BA(IInd year) presented a comprehensive view of the numerous government schemes for girls and the improvements they need. Various students of other departments participated in the program as well. Prof. Rachana Dubey (Principal) highlighted the gender roles women are supposed to play and correlated it with the politics of today. Thereafter, Prof. Bhavana Trivedi (HOD, Department of Political Science) threw light on the condition and direction of today’s politics with reference to the need of youth. She congratulated the government for the opportunities being offered by them for youth but at the same time she also highlighted the drawbacks higher education is facing due to poor implementation of policies. The program concluded with her remark and became successful as it provided students with a new outlook.

- 6- In order to inculcate civic duties in the minds and heart of students, the Department of Political Science organized a student Seminar on the topic “Citizenship Responsibility in Nation-Building” on 16th January, 2023 in room no 42 at 12 noon.. The department aims to develop informed and responsible citizens who will become the pillars of a strong nation. Prof. Bhavana Trivedi (Head of Department) addressed the Seminar to introduce the topic and its motto. Thereafter, Prof. Vishwanath Mishra informed the students about how the concept of citizenship has widened over the years. He also provided students with several examples of various nations which flourished because of the responsible citizens. Dr. D. Surendra Naik offered students with the wider concept of nation-building and advised students to take an oath of being responsible citizens. In total, 32 students participated in the seminar. 12 of them, presented their research paper on the topic “Citizenship Responsibility in Nation Building”. Manisha Kumari of BA(III) year, in her research paper, underlined the crucial aspects involved in Nation building and how responsible citizenry can bring great changes. Few students also presented their views on how awareness can be spread among the masses as the knowledge of rights predominate over the responsibilities associated with the citizens. Dr. Sadhana Mishra, Ms. Suman Sinha, Ms. Priya Yadav and Ms. Devika Tiwari were also present in the event.

- 7- Acknowledging the role of women in politics and their underrepresentation leading to marginalization of women's issues, the Department of Political Science decided to organize a Seminar on the topic "Underrepresentation of Women in Politics" on 16th April, 2023 in room no 35 at 11am. The Seminar started with the address of Prof. Bhavana Trivedi (Head of Department) who underlined the role of women in society in general and in politics in particular. She mentioned the text of Vedas and connected it with the condition of women in 21st Century. Thereafter, Prof. Vishwanath Mishra enlightened the students with the thought of Savitribai Phule and its relevance in today's politics. Dr. D. Surendra Naik underlined the major causes which are obstructing women from entering politics. Students of BA (III)yr participated in this seminar and presented their research papers as well. They highlighted the aspect that along with underrepresentation, biasness towards women and misogynous behaviour have contributed towards lack of women representatives in India. In total, 7 research papers were presented and 49 students attended the seminar. Dr. Sadhana Mishra, Ms. Suman Sinha, Ms. Priya Yadav and Ms. Devika Tiwari were also present in the event.

- 8- During the college festival called "Abhyuday", the Department of Political Science organized a debate on the topic "Political Culture: Role of Media" on 15th February, 2023 at 3.00 pm. As media is said to be the fourth pillar of democracy, its role in interest articulation of the masses is immense. In order to make students understand the role of unbiased media, this debate was organized. Prof. Bhavana Trivedi (Head of Department) in her address, introduced the topic and shared her experiences where important news went unreported which questions the existence of honest reporting. Students of B.A (II) YR, B.A (III)yr and M.A (I)st year participated in this debate and presented their views eloquently. 1st Prize was awarded to Shivani Yadav of M.A (I) yr. Prof. Bhavana Trivedi presented the certificate to the winner and also encouraged all the participants in the end. Dr. Vishwanath Mishra engaged the students with the concept of Ecological succession and how major changes can be witnessed through checking the ecological footprints. Dr. D. Surendra Naik explained to the students about the measures being adopted by various institutions globally in order to avoid ecological imbalance. The students of BA (II)nd year participated in this seminar and made it successful. In total, 68 students participated in the seminar, out of which 9 students presented their research paper. The book titled “Earth Democracy” was also presented to the Principal. Dr. Sadhana Mishra, Ms. Suman Sinha, Ms. Priya Yadav and Ms. Devika Tiwari were also present in the event.

- 10- Politics has lost its grace due to embrace of unethical measures. Considering this image of politics, the Department of Political Science opted to contribute its part in off taking the grace politics used to hold. In order to achieve this goal, the Department of Political Science organized a student seminar on 8th May at 11am in room no 9. In this seminar, Ms. Suman Sinha highlighted the role of ethics in Gandhiji’s political thought and how he had set a milestone for the upcoming politicians to achieve. In this seminar, 8 students presented their research paper. They expressed disregard for the unethical measures adopted in politics and their possible outcomes. Few suggestions were also made by the students to check such unethical behavior. Towards the end, the students took a pledge to never indulge themselves in indecent politics in future and become a responsible citizen.
